

Does God hate the sin but love the sinner?

Psalm 5:5 - The boastful shall not stand in Your sight;
You hate all workers of iniquity.

If you had a friend that killed me and you stood before the judge and your friend was next to you and you didn't want to lie. But the judge asks you "Did he kill Ty?" and you say "Yeah, he did kill him, but separate his act from who he is". Is that going to fly with the judge? Probably not. We are sinners by trait, sinners by choice, and sinners by nature. You can't separate the sin from the sinner. That is like trying to separate the crime from the person who committed it.

Also check out the following article http://www.the-highway.com/lovesinner_Gerstner.html