

TRIAL LAWYERS FOR JACKPOT JUSTICE

"You only lose if you don't try"

Dear Mr. Frank:

It was with great distress, dare I say, severe emotional distress, that we read your article "Jackpot Justice Gets New Meaning" published in August of this year. As your research has no doubt uncovered, we are a group of trial lawyers committed to the now venerated principle that anything can happen at trial. If one is to gamble, why not gamble with other people's money? Isn't that the responsible thing to do?

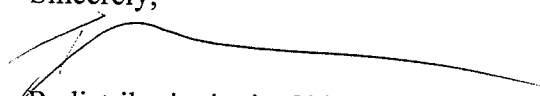

Perhaps, in your rush to condemn our organization, you overlooked the fact that many of our members have children to support, ex-wives with court orders compelling a piece of our winnings, and yes, even gambling habits and debts to pay related to those habits. And the rehab bills. Don't get us started.

Our organization promotes old fashioned American values, such as suing at the drop of a hat for trifles and insults, or even the appearance of trifles and insults. We believe that most Americans are good people, and if something bad happens to them, even if on the surface it appears those people caused all of their own misfortune, somebody else is most likely responsible. And that somebody else should pay. Dearly. Everyone needs a message sent, and what better way to send a message then by punitive damages?

This is our message to you. We stand ready to sue on your behalf even though you purport to criticize our mission. Our team of expert psychologists have already concluded that your failure to appreciate our values, values that clearly benefit you individually, is probably the fault of an as yet unnamed pharmaceutical company. You have probably missed out on many lucrative litigation opportunities because of this affliction, and we call that special damages. You can call our toll free number if you are intrigued.

You can label this "jackpot justice" and smile at your witty alliterations, but just remember, like Eliot Spitzer's long suffering wife, we will be here when you need us most.

Sincerely,

Redistributor-in-Chief
